General Synopsis for Episode #820

In this special episode The Environmentalists, ‘Young Icons’ share their stories of focusing on the environment and giving back to the community. Practicing what she preaches, Jordan Howard, makes earth friendly choices everyday by using reusable bags, bottles and refusing to use straws. Through public speaking, she teaches others simple and sustainable solutions to environmental problems.

Inspired by former Vice President Al Gore on global warming, Alec Loorz started a nonprofit group called Kids vs. Global Warming to help teens learn what to do to lead the green revolution. He shares, “Only you can save energy, your actions matters the most.” Sophie Salmore, a high school sophomore with no gardening experience, created an edible garden at her school to help save the planet. She shares that hard work, determination and planning was needed to get the approval from the school to plant the garden. Her project is now expanded to other communities through The Seedling Project, a virtual online garden of ideas resource. Alexa Beyer is known as Compost Girl at her high school. She brought compost bins to her school to teach others about what we eat affects our environment. She sells the soil created from the compost to nurseries. The profits are donated to the L.A. Food Bank. Alexa knows composting makes a difference by saying, “if you do something positive for the environment it improves it”.
